Issue to Feature During Modi

Given the likely impact that such legislation could have on thousands of Indian professionals, the issue will feature prominently during talks between Prime Minister Narendra Modi and US President Donald Trump later this year, senior officials told ET.

On Monday, a report by Bloomberg said an executive order to be signed by Trump would seek to curb the use of long-term H-1B visas, and the short-term L-1, E-2 and B1 visas.

Foreign policy experts reckon that untangling this knotty issue will be a challenge for the Modi government, which is very conscious of protecting the interests and welfare of the Indian diaspora. Lofgren's proposed legislation prioritises market-based quota of H-1B visas to firms willing to pay 200% of a fixed wage. "For H-1B dependent firms the changes to regulations and laws will likely create margin headwinds, (especially) for firms such as Cognizant, Infosys and Wipro," said Peter Bender-Samuel, CEO of research firm Everest Group.

"This is likely to accelerate the adoption of the new digital business models which hold the promise of margins which are not dependent on labour arbitrage," he said. TCS, Wipro and HCL Tech did not respond to emails seeking comment. In-fossys declined to comment.

MOVING WORK BACK TO INDIA

Analysts are of the view that outsourcing firms will need to now confer with customers about moving work back to India. "Earlier, clients liked to have people onsite. But with these new rules, they will become more receptive to having fewer people onshore," said Dinesh Goel, the India head of IT research firm ISG. The US accounts for nearly 65% of revenues of the Indian IT services industry.

Industry lobby National Association of Software and Services Companies (Nasscom) said Lofgren's proposed Bill "definitely has an impact on the global delivery model", which, simply put, translates to executing a technology project using a team that is distributed across geographies.

The Bill's provisions also mean that IT firms will now look at sending more senior employees like project managers or team leaders to the US, instead of programmers or technicians.

Currently, the average salary of a technology professional on an H-1B visa is $65,000-75,000, according to Alka Dhingra, assistant general manager at IT staffing firm TeamLease Services.

At present, the US has a cap of 65,000 visas for the general category and allows a further 20,000 people who have a US masters' degree from an accredited institution to apply. In a year, nearly 200,000 H-1B visa applications are approved, including visa renewals, extensions and other exempt categories, according to industry estimates.

TeamLease's Dhingra said H-1B hiring saw a downward trend in 2016. "For TCS, US visa applications narrowed to 4,000 in 2016 as against 14,000 in the previous year and only a third of them were granted last year," she told ET.

FATE OF BILL

Experts are divided over whether the Bill would be passed.

Phil Fersht, CEO at IT research firm Horseshoe Sources, thinks the chances of the Bill being passed into law are high, with some amendments, given the strong support from several politicians. "Immigration of temporary workers to the US will be completely thrown into turmoil, but it will also encourage US businesses to hire talent in non-US countries in specific areas where they ne-
